Reflection for this week: The craving for godliness is subtle and worms its way into every corner of life. (Jesus himself was tempted to misuse his Sonship of God.) No wonder, then, that the Number One Commandment is, “I am the Lord your God; you shall not have false gods before me.” When we abide by this principle, all else fits into place. But the urge to do differently, pulses within us: For the parent, it is to own the child as a carbon copy; for the priest, to seek privilege; for the politician, to feed on power; for the farmer, to esteem land above humans; for the one in business, to venerate profits; for the scientist or technician, to be in control. Self-worship is seen in the person who wants everyone else to suit them while they themselves do whatever they please. When little gods collide, rows and wars erupt. Ask; Search; Knock. And sometimes Kneel. – Bernie Moloney (Diocese of Cahel and Emly)

Seventeenth Sunday in Ordinary Time (Year C)

The master of any art can make it appear very simple. So, it was with Jesus as a master of prayer. He spoke in very simple human terms. He gave God a human face. And he described the depths of a disciple's relationship with the Father in familiar stories of hospitality and parental care. We can understand the loyalty in human friendships, or the effectiveness of persistence, or the care and protection that are part of a parent's love. That's how God is towards us, multiplied to the power of 'how much more.' Obviously, we do not always get exactly what we ask for. Ten people praying for the one job cannot all get the post? Nobody would ever die if it were only a matter of saying a prayer for a cure! Yet, God as a loving parent, hears every prayer.

The point of petition is not as if God were unwilling to give to us unless we cajoled him or twisted his hand by prayer. Often times the mountains that have to be moved by the prayer of faith are the obstacles in ourselves. The humiliation of having to ask for something breaks in our unhealthy self-sufficiency. Repeated asking may force us into facing whether our motivation is unduly selfish. Somewhere along the line God will test the selfishness of our faith; are we using religion to serve ourselves.... or God? When I say, 'Thy will be done', may it not sometimes be a camouflaged form of 'My will be done'? It can be good for us when we have to persist in our asking. What comes to us too easily is often not appreciated. What we have to work for is treasured more. The answer to sustained prayer is more likely to be appreciated. It's we who change....and grow into God's will....by perseverance in asking, searching, and knocking.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, we thank you for listening to our petitions. Help us to trust always in your loving ways and to accept your will in our lives.

God Bless and Keep Safe, Canon Maurice
